Handbook for Defining and Setting Up a Food Security Information and Early Warning System (FSIEWS)-Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations 2001 The World Food Summit, held in Rome in November 1996, recognised the urgent need for better information. As a result the FIVIMS (Food Insecurity and Vulnerability Information and Mapping System) initiative was launched, as a co-operative venture, to assist countries and the international community to identify the "who, where and why" of food insecurity. Even before the Summit, many countries had established approaches for this purpose based on multidisciplinary networks, at national and local levels. One of these approaches, developed first in French-speaking Africa, is the FSIEWS method (Food Security Information and Early Warning System) proposed in this handbook as one of the tools available to those engaged in the fight against hunger. This contribution to the FIVIMS initiative is addressed to the national technical officers at central and decentralised level, as well as to their collaborators from the technical assistance community.

Set-up-to-Fail Syndrome-Jean-Francois Manzoni 2007-02-01 Do you have an employee whose performance keeps deteriorating—despite your close monitoring? Brace yourself: You may be at fault—by unknowingly triggering the set-up-to-fail syndrome. Perhaps things started off swimmingly. But then something--a missed deadline, a lost client—made you question the person's performance. You began micromanaging him. Suspecting your reduced confidence, he started doubting himself—and stopped giving his best. You viewed his new behavior as additional proof of mediocrity, and tightened the screws further. In The Set-Up-to-Fail Syndrome, Jean-Francois Manzoni and Jean-Louis Barsoux show how this insidious cycle hurts everyone: employees stop volunteering ideas, preventing your organization from getting the most from them; you lose energy to attend to other activities; and your reputation suffers as other employees deem you unfair. Team spirit wilts as targeted performers are alienated. But the set-up-to-fail syndrome doesn't have to happen. The authors provide preventive measures, such as loosening the reins as new employees master their jobs. If the syndrome has already erupted, Manzoni and Barsoux explain how to discuss the dynamic with your employee and reverse the cycle.

Development of an Ultrafast Low-Energy Electron Diffraction Setup-Max Gulde

2015-05-26 This book presents an Ultrafast Low-Energy Electron Diffraction (ULEED) system that reveals ultrafast structural changes on the atomic scale. The achievable temporal resolution in the low-energy regime is improved by several orders of magnitude and has enabled the melting of a highly-sensitive, molecularly thin layer of a polymer crystal to be resolved for the first time. This new experimental approach permits time-resolved structural investigations of systems that were previously partially or totally inaccessible, including surfaces, interfaces and atomically thin films. It will be of fundamental importance for understanding the properties of nanomaterials so as to tailor their properties.

Implementation of an Automated Test Setup for Measuring Electrical Conductance of Concrete-Edward J. Hoppe 2007 This project was designed to provide the Virginia Department of Transportation (VDOT) with an automated laboratory setup for performing the rapid chloride permeability test (RCPT) to measure the electrical conductance of concrete in accordance with applicable standards. As an increasing number of construction projects is becoming subject to concrete permeability acceptance testing, there is a growing need for conducting laboratory RCPT in a timely and expedient manner. Typically, concrete cylinders arrive at VDOT's materials laboratory in large batches, sometimes more than 100 units at a time. This often results in backlogs in processing and leads to considerable delays. The lack of commercially available test equipment created a need to develop an automated device that could expedite large scale production testing. The Virginia Transportation Research Council was contacted to provide technical assistance. This report describes the practical implementation of a workable RCPT device. An automated laboratory setup for conducting RCPTs was developed and implemented at VDOT. The microprocessor-controlled device is capable of unattended measurement and monitoring of up to 32 concrete specimens at a time in accordance with AASHTO and ASTM test methods. The device is based on the Campbell Scientific CR10X Datalogger interfaced with the Campbell Scientific AM16/32 Multiplexer. Date- and time-stamped test records are stored electronically in ASCII format. As there are no commercially available devices with a comparable function, it is difficult to assess the initial cost of development and setup. There are, however, substantial cost savings associated with the operation of this device. It is estimated that the resultant savings are equivalent to the costs of one full-time technician position in VDOT's materials laboratory. These costs are approximately $46,000 per year, accounting for salary and benefits.
